

The Vol Edge is designed to help you build the skills and experience employers are looking for; learn to communicate the value of your skills, experience, and education; and build your confidence. The program will become available in three stages between Spring 2025 and Fall 2026.

Spring 2025 Online Career Learning

Five self-paced, online learning interactions to help you:

- Learn about the skills employers are looking for
- Find internships, research experiences, study abroad programs, service-learning courses, and other resume building opportunities
- Build your career toolkit
- Tell your story to employers / grad schools
- Learn how to network
- Manage your well-being during the career journey

Fall 2025 Experiential Learning Support

Wraparound support to help you with experiential learning:

- Complete an approved experience, like an internship, undergraduate research, service-learning, a study abroad, etc.
- Complete a workshop before and after your experience to prepare and then learn how to talk about your experience through resumes and interviews.

Fall 2026 Coaching for Telling Your Story

Practice, get feedback, and complete final learning:

- Practice sharing your story through interviewing, personal statements, resumes, etc., and get feedback from professionals in your areas of interest to help you sharpen your skills
- Complete a final learning interaction to help you build your financial literacy

Students who complete the entire Vol Edge program will earn a graduation distinction as well as other incentives along the way.

If you graduate before the entire program is available, you can still earn the incentives associated with the program pieces that are available.
